Happy Friday, Briefers! 54 years ago today, Richard Nixon and the U.S. took the dollar off the gold standard, moving to FIAT.

- Since then, the U.S. has added trillions of dollars in GDP, outpacing other world powers.

But: The dollar has also lost more than 80% of its value since 1971.

So, was it a good move or a bad move? Well that's up for debate, but we'll be breaking it down in this Sunday's Market Briefs.

Inflation Back In Focus

Tuesday's CPI report showed that prices haven't gone up much for consumers.

But, Thursday's PPI report showed that prices for businesses shot up nearly 1% in July, much higher than expected.

- What's PPI? It measures how much businesses pay for goods, instead of how much consumers pay for things.

It's a sign that companies are eating extra tariff costs, but some experts think that those costs will be pushed onto consumers soon.

Rate Cuts? Hold Your Horses

Yesterday's hot PPI report increased the chances that the Fed will hold rates steady at its next meeting, according to CME.

- The numbers: On Wednesday, investors were pricing in a 100% chance that the Fed would cut rates in September.

But, after the PPI report, there's now only a 90% chance the Fed will cut.

The takeaway: It's still likely that the Fed will cut rates, but it is now less certain with inflation picking back up.

So Long Soy

The U.S. has been steadily losing out to Brazil in soybean exports for over a decade.

Now? China is buying more beans from Brazil, because it doesn't want to depend on the U.S. as much.

Briefs Pro analyst Jackson Moreland says,

"Brazil has become a major player on the world stage. It has a bull market that has been able to shrug off U.S. tariffs."

Trade Triangle

India's relationship with the U.S. is a bit tense after the U.S. hit India with 50% tariffs.

So India is keeping its options open, trying to cozy up to China.

- The countries are going to let direct flights restart after a 5-year hiatus.
- Resuming trade at the Himalayan border is being floated, too.

The Indian Prime Minister is planning his first trip to China in 7 years.

Big Red Tractor

John Deere's (DE -6.79%) big green tractors were in the red yesterday.

What happened? The stock traded lower after the company said it might make less money this year than expected.

The CEO said Deere's customers are facing "challenging times" and are being more careful with their money.

A Quick Turnaround

Last week, President Trump was calling for Intel's (INTC +7.38%) CEO to step down.

> This week? The White House is thinking about investing in Intel after meeting with its CEO.

With government investment, Intel would be able to build more chip plants in the U.S.

Bitcoin About Face

Bitcoin shot to new highs Thursday before diving back down.

- That's because Treasury Secretary Bessent said the U.S. won't be buying Bitcoin in a strategic reserve.

The news surprised some, as President Trump previously directed Bessent to find cheap ways to buy Bitcoin.

Crime And Crypto

Blockchain founder Justin Sun plans to sue Bloomberg for exposing his personal crypto holdings.

Sun is included in Bloomberg's index of billionaires, and they asked him to verify financial details he thought would stay secret.

But he is worried crypto kidnappers could target him with what will be published.

The Much-Needed Spark

It's no secret that the housing market has been off to a slow start this year, with sales dropping to 30-year lows.

Why is it so slow? Not enough houses and high mortgage rates are keeping prices too high.

But, some housing economists say the fix is simple: lower mortgage rates.

In fact, even if mortgage rates dropped by 1%, it would be enough to "unlock" the housing market, according to experts.

Game, Set, Flip

Tennis star Naomi Osaka made around $2M for winning the Australian Open a couple of years ago.

Now? She just made around the same amount by flipping a house in California.

- Three years ago, Osaka bought a mansion in LA for around $6M.

She put some work into the house, added a gym and recovery center, and just sold the house back to the same couple for around $8M.
